UIET Kurukshetra

University Institute of Engineering & Technology (UIET) was established in 2004 under Kurukshetra University, carrying forward a legacy that began in 1956. What started as a modest department with a handful of students and borrowed classrooms has grown into one of North India's most sought-after engineering institutes not because of grandeur, but because of the grit of its people.

ABOUT US

A relentless student community, an alumni network that pulls back to lift forward, an administration that empowers before it governs, and a supporting staff that shows up with action have contributed to its pre-eminent status promoting ingenious visionaries, encouraging budding entrepreneurs, and sowing the seeds of innovation in its students.

About E-Summit

E-Summit UIET is the annual flagship event where students pitch to investors, navigate virtual markets, and stress-test business plans against real scrutiny. Behind it stands E-Cell: a community forged in hostel rooms where side projects became prototypes, and prototypes became pitches. We are not a committee with a room. We are builders who ensure ideas do not die in notebooks. E-Summit is our largest stage where founders, investors, and students ready to build instead of listen, converge. We do not chase scale. We chase utility for the student with an idea at 2 AM and nowhere to take it.

IMAGINE. CREATE. EVOLVE.

At E-Summit, we believe progress begins with imagination and grows through creation. Every bold thought, every fresh perspective, and every driven mind has the potential to shape what comes next. Whether you are exploring your first idea, building something meaningful, or redefining your path, this is your space to experiment, express, and expand

Join us to imagine possibilities, create with purpose, and evolve into the change you want to see. Because the future belongs to those who dare to build.

2 IPL Auction Simulation

Step into the shoes of an IPL franchise owner and experience the thrill of building a championship-winning team. IPL Auction Simulation is a high-energy strategy competition where participants manage a virtual franchise, compete against rival teams, and make real-time bidding decisions within a limited budget.

Each team is allotted a fixed virtual purse and competes in a live auction to bid for players from a curated player pool. However, success is not determined by signing the biggest stars alone. Participants must carefully analyze player performances, maintain squad balance, manage finances wisely, and build a team capable of winning the tournament while adhering to auction rules and squad constraints.

The competition tests participants' strategic thinking, financial planning, negotiation skills, decision-making under pressure, resource allocation, teamwork, and leadership. Every bid carries an opportunity cost, making each decision critical to the success of the franchise.

Designed to replicate the excitement and complexity of a professional IPL auction, this event offers an immersive experience where business strategy meets the world of sports. Whether you're a cricket enthusiast or someone passionate about management and analytics, IPL Auction Simulation promises an engaging platform to showcase your tactical and managerial abilities.

The Big Brand Theory

Can you identify why great businesses fail—and how they could have succeeded?

The Big Brand Theory is a unique business case study competition that challenges participants to analyze once-prominent companies that eventually failed. Each team will be assigned a real business or brand and will investigate its journey from growth to decline using research, critical thinking, and strategic analysis.

Participants must identify the key reasons behind the company's failure, evaluate its financial and operational performance, understand the founders' vision and decision-making, and propose a well-researched strategy that could have transformed the company into a successful and sustainable business.

To encourage in-depth research and innovation, participants will have full internet access and are allowed to use AI tools for research, analysis, and presentation preparation.

The final submission will be a professionally designed PDF report covering:

- Company background and business model.
- Founder's vision and mindset.
- Company by numbers (revenue, profit/loss, valuation, market share, growth, etc.)
- Timeline of major decisions and turning points.
- Root-cause analysis of the company's failure.
- Market and competitor analysis.
- SWOT analysis.
- A data-driven turnaround strategy and business model improvements.

Pitch Please Competition

Can you sell the impossible?

Pitch Please is a high-energy, creativity-driven pitching competition that challenges participants to market an absurd, fictional, or seemingly useless product or service. The event is designed to test entrepreneurial thinking, creativity, market analysis and the ability to persuade an audience under pressure.

Each team will be assigned a unique fictional product or service and will have 10 minutes of internet access to conduct research, brainstorm ideas, and prepare their strategy. After the preparation period, all internet access will be discontinued, and participants must rely solely on the information they gathered to complete their presentation.

Teams will prepare a professional pitch deck that includes:

- A creative branding and advertising campaign.
- Market analysis and target audience identification.
- Estimated global customer base with logical justification.
- Revenue model and business strategy.
- Financial overview, including a simplified term sheet and profit/loss projection.
- A compelling final sales pitch to convince the investors.

The competition evaluates participants on creativity, analytical thinking and teamwork, making it an exciting blend of innovation and entrepreneurship. Even the most impossible idea can become a winning business—if you can pitch it convincingly.

Workshop: Mastering The Term Sheet

Every successful startup is built on strong financial understanding. Mastering the Term Sheet is a practical workshop designed to help founders understand the numbers that truly drive their business. From revenue streams and profit margins to expenses, cash flow, and financial projections, participants will learn how to analyze their startup from an investor's perspective.

A well-structured term sheet and financial model not only reflect the health of a business but also play a crucial role in attracting investors. Investors invest in numbers as much as they invest in ideas, and having a clear understanding of your startup's financials significantly improves your fundraising readiness.

The workshop will be led by an experienced Chartered Accountant (CA), who will go beyond theoretical concepts and provide practical insights into startup finance. Participants will also get hands-on experience in creating and understanding real-life term sheets, along with an interactive Q&A session where they can discuss their own startup challenges and financial queries.

Whether you are preparing to raise your first investment or simply want to build a financially stronger startup, this workshop will equip you with the knowledge and confidence to present your business in a way that investors value.
